COUNCIL HEARS MANY MATTERS

Various Street and Sewer Questions Given Attention by Borough Councilmen. Railroads Promise to Abate Noise Nuisance.

Streets, alleys, pavements, sewers, fire plugs, and all the other departments of activity of the borough councilmen came up for their attention at the regular October meeting Tuesday night.
The old question of the liability for unpaid promises for the construction of the first block of York street, was again brought up by Borough Solicitor Swope who said Dr. Markley denied any liability for the subscriptions, of other citizens but had turned over $55 contributed by property owners. Council accepted the money and instructed Mr. Swope to endeavor to collect from several persons who have, as yet, not paid their share of the work done in 1913.

Mr. Keith reported the offensive condition of The Tiber unabated. Other councilmen were of the opinion that nothing but heavy rains would clean the stream and remove the unpleasant odors. The borough solicitor was instructed to notify all having sewers emptying into The Tiber to disconnect at once.

Mr. Stock asked for information regarding the proposed sewer extension in the southeast end of town across government properties. Mr. Kitzmiller, clerk, was instructed to write to the Secretary of War asking the necessary permission. The matter has been pending for several months.

A request from Allen B. Plank for a 35 foot sewer connection to his property on North Stratton street was presented by Mr. Beard and refused.

Mr. Baughman reported pavements needed at the Tawney and Wassem properties in the Third Ward. The necessary notices had been served, it was reported, and the highway committee was instructed to build the pavements.

The condition of the alley in the rear of Baltimore street, between High and Breckenridge, was referred to the highway committee.

Mr. Keith asked for a report on the placing of a fire plug at the corner of Lincoln avenue and Mummaburg street. The property committee reported that the plug was not needed and Mr. Keith insisted that it was from 1000 to 1200 feet from the plug at the corner of Washington street to the most western house on Lincoln avenue. The matter was referred back to the property committee for further investigation.

Letters were read from officials of both railroads indicating the reducing of all noises to a minimum and, from the Reading promising the safeguarding so far as possible of traffic at the crossings in the western end of town, by forbidding any shifting at those places.

Borough Attorney Swope reported that there was nothing in the ordinance, granting a franchise to the United Telephone Company, which would allow the borough to interfere in the matter of rates charged.

A bill of $9 for the boarding of the six State police here on the day of the colored excursion was presented and ordered paid.

A compromise proposition presented by the Mertz heirs, for the adjustment of damage claim for the sewer at their property in the western end of town, was held over.

Burgess Raymond reported collections for July of $26.50, for August of $11.50, and for September of $4.25. Market Master Emmons reported collections for the month of $37.50. The treasurer reported a balance of $2506.12 in the general fund and of $76.09 in the special fund. Hack licenses collected to date this year have reached a total of $352, paid by about fifty hackmen.

THIRD ARTILLERY PASSED THROUGH

Three Batteries on the Way Back to Fort Myer Go through Gettysburg. Littlestown the Terminus of the Day's March.

Gettysburg was given another touch of the military this morning when Batteries D, E, and F, of the Third United States Field Artillery marched through town with full equipment on their way to Fort Myer. The outfit is composed of 360 men and they are on their way back from Fort Malone, New York.

The trip as far as Harrisburg was made by railroad, two trains of twenty three cars each being required to transport the three batteries with men and horses. When the trains rolled into the Capitol City it looked like the entrance of a small circus. On Monday night they encamped at Wormleysburg, several miles this side of Harrisburg and Tuesday night they were near York Springs, leaving early this morning.

Preceding the artillery came a detail of eight Signal Corps men in one of the large regulation automobiles equipped for their branch of the service. They passed through town about nine o'clock and went on to Littlestown where all will encamp to-night.

The three batteries have with them twelve 3-inch field pieces, lumbering caissons, a dozen or more baggage wagons and scores of horses. Major Snow is in command of the batteries which contain many officers and men who have visited Gettysburg in other years and have made friends here. It is much regretted, for this reason, that their itinerary did not provide for a stop near town.

Troops L and M of the Fifth United States Cavalry with their band broke camp at daybreak this morning and left on their return to Fort Myer. They will take a different route from the artillery and will go back the way they came, by Emmitsburg, Thurmont and Frederick.

DR. BRUMBAUGH HERE ON TOUR

Republican Campaign Speakers Come to Gettysburg on their Trip through Adams County. College Students Hear Brumbaugh.

The Republican State campaigning party came into Adams County this morning, spent several hours in Gettysburg, and then left on a tour of the eastern portion of the county.

Included in the party were Dr. Martin G. Brumbaugh, of Philadelphia, candidate for governor; Hon. Henry S. Houck, candidate for secretary of internal affairs; Mahlon S. Garland, Thomas S. Crago and Daniel F. Lefean, candidates for congressman-at-large. They were accompanied by a number of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh newspaper men.

The original intention was that the party should visit the principal towns in the northern and western portions of the county this morning but they were delayed in Franklin County and that portion of the trip had to be abandoned. From Chambersburg the tour here was made by automobile and, on top of the mountain, they were met by a local committee consisting of R. C. Miller, George W. Baker and James Moore. Arriving here, they made Hotel Gettysburg their headquarters.

At noon Dr. Brumbaugh addressed the students of the college at their morning chapel services. He was introduced by President Granville as an alumnus, for he was granted the degree of doctor of laws by this institution several years ago. Dr. Brumbaugh acknowledged this gracefully and then talked for fifteen minutes of the advantages of the classical, scientific and technical education as given at the local school.

"You need have no fear for your own future or that of the State if you will follow the light of those who have made these courses possible," Dr. Brumbaugh said, and explained that he felt it was more appropriate to talk to college boys on such matters than to take up the brief time allotted to him for a dissertation on "cheap politics".

The party held a reception for voters at Hotel Gettysburg after dinner and left then for Littlestown, New Oxford, Abbottstown and East Berlin.

HAMILTON W. KING

Former Burgess of East Berlin Dies in York.

Hamilton W. King, a former chief Burgess of East Berlin, died at 4:30 p. m. Tuesday at the residence of his niece, Mrs. F. C. Knapp, in York from a complication of diseases.

He had been in failing health for the past ten years and was confined to bed the last 18 weeks. Mr. King was aged seventy nine years and one month. Mr. King is said to have been the oldest member of the Improved Order of Red Men, in point of service in the United States. He was a member since 1857.

He is survived by a sister, Mrs. Elmira La Motte, York, and a grandson, George King, Lovettsville, Virginia.

Funeral services this evening in York. The body will be removed on Friday morning to East Berlin where further services will be held and interment made.

HOME TALENT MUSICAL SHOW

Big Musical Comedy to be Given here Early Next Month under Direction of Expert Play Producer. Many Young People in it.

"Fi Fi and Her Toy Shop", an elaborate home talent musical comedy, is to be presented in Walter's Theatre on Saturday, November 7, matinee and evening. The proceeds are to be devoted to the maintenance of the Kurtz Playground.

The show has been produced in scores of towns throughout the country and is a great favorite for home talent work. John Rogers, of Fostoria, Ohio, an expert director, will be here two weeks before the date to direct rehearsals and scores of the young people of town will be invited to take part.

It is the plan to draw the choruses as largely as possible from the young people who enjoyed the privileges of the playground during the past summer. The various organizations of boys and girls, who used the place for basket ball or other sports, will be invited to participate and it is believed all of them will accept.

The principals will be drawn from among the young people of town and college who have musical talent. Miss Lillian Ring has consented to take the lead and several others have agreed to take important parts. The interest, which has already been manifested, augurs well for the success of the undertaking.

The story of the comedy has to do with a toy shop in which there are many dolls—American dolls, Chinese dolls, African dolls, and dolls of other nationalities. Suddenly all of them become animated, living beings and they join in a feast of frolic and song through all of which is woven a delightful little story.

Arrangements for the show are under the direction of the Gettysburg Camp Fire Girls who are receiving co-operation from their friends and all others interested in the permanency of the Kurtz Playground proposition.

MANY INJURIES

Fred. Welty in Philadelphia Hospital with Many Broken Bones.

With both shoulder blades and his collar bone broken, and fractures of both arms, Frederick Welty, formerly of Gettysburg, is in a serious condition in the West Philadelphia Hospital as the result of an accident last Friday when a motorcycle on which he and his brother-in-law, Thomas Harbridge Jr., were riding collided with an automobile on one of the streets of the city. Mr. Harbaugh had three ribs broken. The driver of the automobile, Mrs. Fannie Simpson, gave bail for her appearance at a hearing.

Mr. Welty is a brother of Mrs. Guy Bruner, of York street. He has been living in Philadelphia for several years, and is employed at a garage.

POWDER BLEW UP

Youngster Experimented with Match at the Dedication.

When William Menchey, the thirteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Menchey, of West High street, applied a match to a little pile of powder left over from the salutes at the Wadsworth dedication Tuesday afternoon, there was a slight explosion and bits of the powder were thrown over his face and hands, burning him painfully. Samuel Noel brought him to town on his bicycle and he was given medical attention. The burns are not serious.

CAR RECOVERED

Car Removed from McKnightstown Found Stalled on Hill.

On Tuesday Clifford Sanders, son of Howard Sanders, found the stolen Ford car of Conrad Walter on Kiser's Hill, near Fairfield, where it had evidently stalled and been abandoned by the thief who had removed it from the Walter garage in McKnightstown during the night.

ALLIES FACE NEW ARMY BUT EXTEND THEIR FRONT

Foe Masses Troops to Move on Flank.

GERMANS REGAIN FORT

Berlin Reports Capture of Stronghold on Meuse.

FURIOUS FIGHTING CONTINUES

British Advance Their Trenches Near Soissons.

London, Oct. 7.—The latest official bulletin from the scene of the great battle in France was issued in Paris and stated that the fighting on the allies left wing, north of the Oise river, was becoming more violent.

An earlier Paris bulletin announced the extension of the allies' front on their left, despite the fact that an important cavalry force of Germans had appeared north of Lille.

Berlin announces that the Germans have again captured Fort Camp de Romans, on the Meuse river, near St. Mihiel, which they were compelled to abandon a short time ago. The statement is made that the German entrenchments have been extended fifteen miles at some places on their right.

The last French bulletin said: "The characteristics of the situation remain the same. On our left wing, to the north of the Oise, the action is becoming more violent. At the center there is relative calm. A little ground has been gained in the region north of the heights of the Meuse."

The earlier bulletin said: "On our left wing the front is extending more and more widely. Very important masses of German cavalry have been reported in the environs of Lille, coming from forces of the enemy which are making a movement in the region to the north of the line between Tourcoing (in the department of Nord, seven miles northeast of Lille) and Armentieres (nine miles northwest of Lille)."

"In the vicinity of Arras and on the right bank of the River Somme the situation shows little change. Between the Somme and the Oise there have been alternate advances and withdrawals. Near Lassigny the enemy undertook an important attack, which, however, failed."

"On the right bank of the Aisne, north of Soissons, we have, with the co-operation of the British army, made a slight advance. We have also made some progress in the vicinity of Berry-au-Bac."

"There is nothing to report from the rest of the front."

"In Belgium the Belgian forces defending Antwerp have occupied strongly the line between the River Rupel and the River Nethe; against this line the attacks of the Germans have failed."

"Fighting continued night and day, particularly on our right wing, where the enemy is stubbornly resisting our offensive. He is being driven back, however. Our entrenchments have been extended fifteen miles at some points. On Sunday night the enemy made a particularly sharp attack in an attempt to surprise us, and severe fighting ensued for six hours. He was repulsed and forced to retire in haste to escape being cut off. The aerial scouts have been of great value in learning the movements of the enemy."

A statement issued in Berlin said: "On our left wing we have again advanced to the Meuse."

"Fort Camp de Romans, on the River Meuse, near St. Mihiel, after a number of hard fights, has been taken by the Germans. Five French officers and more than 500 men were made prisoners. The remainder of the French force perished in the ruins of the casemate."

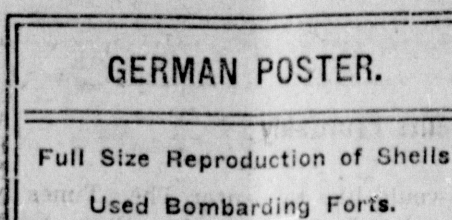

"In the center the artillery duel continues. The situation in general indicates that a decided result is not yet at hand."

"As a result of the breach made in the fortifications at Antwerp, our lines and artillery have been drawn closer about that city. The inner works are now being bombarded. Our success in the eastern arena has met with no check. We continue to advance."

"It is officially stated that the Russians were completely defeated near Suwalki and Augustowo, on the East Prussian frontier, Oct. 1 and 2. The Germans made three thousand prisoners and captured eighteen cannon and many machine guns."

"The situation, it is announced, is most hopeful everywhere for the Germans and Austrians."

The disclosure that the operations on the western end of the great battle line have reached the vicinity of Lille places the allies in strength at a location easily within ten miles of the Belgian frontier. Taking Lassigny © 1914, by American Press Association.

London has received specimens of a broadsheet published in Berlin, where it is said to have been widely sold. It is a full size reproduction of the 164 inch shell thrown by the great German siege guns, which were first used so effectively in smashing the Liege forts. The legend at the top of the poster means "German War Surprises, 1914." The sheet is labeled "Our 42 cm Bomb," and bears the names of Liege, Namur, Longwy and Mauberge, Belgian and French fortresses, with the dates of their fall and pictures of the ruins. Below is the motto "With God For King and Fatherland." The sheet is held by a man to show the relative size of the shell.

as the elbow of the French battle line, it now extends roughly for eighty miles due north and for considerably more than 100 miles from Lassigny to the eastward.

Despite the official announcement that the allies yielded at some points, confidence in the ultimate success of the French and British is by no means diminished. Meanwhile, without repose and with no sign of a truce, the tremendous battle of millions of men is going on.

"North of the Oise" has appeared for the first time in a war office statement. Hitherto all the combats fought on the right bank of the Oise river have been mentioned either in the region of Roye or between the Somme and the Oise. There is much speculation on the phase of the fighting in that vicinity which can have a greatly varied importance.

The familiarly of the French with the territory is frequently of considerable advantage to them. The marshes of Saint Gond, near the Petit Morin river, are firm in the dry season, and the Germans there had all preparations for an important surprise attack. The night before this was to occur a heavy rain made the swamp a lake and turned the position to the disadvantage of the Germans. The French merely stuck to their positions, and while the Germans were in distress in the soggy ground mowed down large numbers with their artillery fire.

The digging of false trenches and other unusual efforts are being resorted to by one side or the other.

The lists of dead printed in the newspapers are growing. They sometimes furnish the only news of soldiers since their departure for the front.

6 MOS. WAR $17,500,000,000

Economist Also Says Germany May Have to Pay $5,000,000,000.

Paris, Oct. 7.—That the European war will cost the world the sum of $17,500,000,000 if it lasts six months is the declaration of Yves Guyot, economist and former cabinet minister, in the Figaro.

Paul Leroy Beaulieu, another French economist, says public loans that will be necessary after the war will amount to $8,000,000,000. Europe will look to the United States to provide it with money.

"Germany will probably have to pay an indemnity of $4,000,000,000 to $5,000,000,000, says M. Beaulieu. This she could do merely by taxing alcohol and tobacco."

German Losses in Poland.

TO TAX MEDICINE AND CHEWING GUM

New Levies Voted Into House Revenue Bill.

CAUCUS FIGHT COMING

The Tax on Automobile Sales Was Modified to Apply Only to Pleasure Cars.

Washington, Oct. 7.—Stamp taxes on proprietary medicines, cosmetics, perfumes and chewing gum, such as were included in the Spanish War taxes, were voted into the new revenue bill by the Democrats of the senate finance committee just before the measure was turned over to the Democratic senate caucus for approval or revision.

The committee added the medicine tax section to make up for any deficit that their original revision of the house bill might cause and also to increase the revenues as much as possible, for it was understood that the secretary of the treasury would not object if the estimated revenues to be derived should exceed $100,000,000 by a substantial amount. No accurate estimate has yet been given the committee as to the amount to be derived from this new tax, but it will amount to several millions.

The amendment would provide for a graduated stamp tax of one-eighth of a cent on articles costing not more than five cents to five-eighths of a cent for more than fifteen or less than twenty-five cent articles, and five-eighths of a cent for each twenty-five cents of value additional. Articles included in this list are pills, bitters, powders, troches, cordials, tonics, plasters, liniments, salves, ointments, waters, except natural mineral or carbonated natural mineral waters, essences and all similar articles for which a private formula is claimed.

Similar rates of taxation would be applied to perfumery, cosmetics, hair oils, pomades, hair dyes, dentifrices, etc. The proposed tax on chewing gum is four cents for each box worth $1 or less, and four cents additional for each additional dollar of value.

In perfecting the measure the committee stipulated that the proposed tax of fifty cents per horsepower on automobile sales should apply only to passenger automobiles.

Another tax added is on sparkling wines, not otherwise specified in the bill, the rate to be one cent for pints or less, and two cents for more than a pint.

In the proposed tax of $10 for general amusement halls, exception is given "Chautauques, lectures, lyceums, agricultural or industrial fairs and religious and charitable entertainments."

Senator Simmons, chairman of the finance committee, who submitted the bill to the caucus, pleaded for party harmony and prompt action.

STABS MAN TO TEST KNIFE

Victim's Injuries May Prove Fatal. Assailant Flees.

Bethlehem, Pa., Oct. 7.—"I have a better knife than you have," quoted Peter Karchman, a musician, as he spoke to Frank Pockish in the latter's yard, where he was cutting a plug to put in the bungalow of a keg of wine.

Pockish did not question the calibre of Karchman's knife, but Karchman, without a moment's warning, drew his supposedly better blade and then plunged it into Pockish's abdomen.

Karchman fled to the mountains, where he was captured and sent to jail to await the result of his victim's injuries, which it is believed will prove fatal.

CAMDEN BIDS LOW FOR DREADNOUGHT

Newport News Company Gets the Other Contract.

Washington, Oct. 7.—The Newport News Shipbuilding company, at $7,000,000, and the New York Shipbuilding company, at Camden, N. J., at $7,175,000, were the two lowest firms bidding for the construction of the two 32,000 ton battleships to be built for the navy this year. As each concern bid for one ship only, each will receive a contract.

The other bidders were: The Fore River Shipbuilding company, of Quincy, Mass., at $7,449,000, and the Cramp Shipbuilding company, Philadelphia, at $7,625,000.

The battleships are two of a group of three of 32,000 tons displacement, the largest yet designed for the navy of the United States.

The vessels for which bids were opened, as well as the third group to be built in a government yard, will have these dimensions: Length over all, 624 feet; length between perpendiculars, 600 feet; breadth, extreme, 97 feet, 4 1/2 inches; draft, 30 feet; speed, 21 knots. The main batteries will consist of twelve 14-inch guns and four submerged torpedo tubes, while the torpedo defense battery will consist of twenty-two 5-inch rapid fire guns.

U. S. Ambassador to Russia Leaves.

London, Oct. 7.—George T. Mayne, Jr., of San Francisco, the recently appointed American ambassador to Russia, finally decided to leave here Saturday by way of Flushing, thence through Germany, and then across the Baltic to Stockholm, from which port he will sail to Petrograd.

Rob Bank in Daylight.

Oklahoma City, Oct. 7.—Two masked men entered the Farmers and Merchants National bank at Tascalo, in Coal county, and held up K. M. Armstrong, president of the institution, and the cashier. After taking $437 in cash the bandits escaped on horses.

SCENE OF BATTLE LIKE COUNTRY

Striking Descriptive Story
Tells How One Town
Was Razed by Shells.

OF THE AISNE TORN BY CYCLONE

Daring Exploit of a French Air Man—Remarkable Incidents at the Front.

A REMARKABLE pen picture of the Aisne firing line and the destruction wrought in the greatest battle of the world's history is given in a dispatch to the New York Times:

Going over the battlefield of the Marne we found the battle had followed much the same tactics as a cyclone, in that in some places nothing, not even the haystacks, had been disturbed, while in others everything, the villages, roads and fields had been utterly devastated by shells.

As we drove carelessly over the brow of a hill, where the road dipped down a valley into the town, we were in direct line with the German fire, as great holes in the ground and fallen trees testified. On the way in we noticed a church steeple stuck completely off, so after finding an inn, where the proprietor came from the cellar and offered to guard our car and prepare luncheon, we decided first to examine the church. The innkeeper explained that we had come during a lull in the bombardment, but the silent, deserted place lulled all sense of danger. The verger showed us over the church, and we were walking through the ruined nave when suddenly we heard a sound like the shrill whistling of the wind.

"It begins again," our conductor said simply. As the speech ended we heard a loud boom and the sound of falling masonry as a shell struck the far end of the building. We hurried to the hotel, the shells screaming overhead. We saw the buildings tumbling into ruins, glass falling in fine powder and remnants of furniture hanging grotesquely from scraps of masonry.

Sensation Under Fire.

All my life I had wondered what would be the sensation if I ever were under fire—would I be afraid? To my intense relief I suddenly became fatalistic. I was under fire with a vengeance, but instead of being afraid I kept saying to myself, "Being afraid won't help matters; besides, nothing will happen if we just keep close to the walls and away from the middle street."

On the way we met two men in English uniform, who later denounced us as spies. We hailed them, and they replied that they had been cut off from their regiment and were now fighting with the French. Just as luncheon was announced eight soldiers filed into the hotel, arrested us and marched us before the commandant, who saw that our papers were all right, but suggested that on account of the dangerous position we leave as soon as possible.

During the episode of arrest there was another lull in the bombardment, which began again as we were seated at luncheon. All through the meal the shells whistled and screamed overhead, and the dishes rattled constantly on the table.

When the meal was over the proprietor called us to witness what had happened to the far wing of the hotel. It was completely demolished. "Alert" had just been sounded, and the soldiers were running through the streets. We ran out in time to see a building falling half a block away, completely filling the street by which we had entered the town an hour earlier.

Airship in a Hail of Shells.

In a few minutes we heard the sharp crackle of infantry fire about half a mile away, and we had a sudden desire to get away before the automobile retreat was cut off. Just then we heard the sound of an aero engine overhead. It was flying so low that through a glass we could easily see the whirling propeller. The machine was mounted with a rapid fire gun, which was trying to locate the German gunners, who immediately abandoned the destruction of the town in an attempt to bring it down. For ten minutes we saw shells bursting all about it. At times it was lost in smoke, but when the smoke cleared there was the monoplane still blazing away, always mounting to a higher level, and finally disappearing toward the French lines.

We passed the night at a village where considerable execution had been done by German shells. We saw one curious effect of them. In a historic building near the city hall there was a shell imbedded in the wall, with a plate affixed beneath it, showing it struck there in the year 1814. Just next to it was an unexploded shell of a hundred years after sticking in the wall.

We again struck out toward the battle line, but when we were within sound of the firing the authorities decided we had seen enough of war and detained us for two days as guests of a regimental staff which was quartered in a cow yard. There we were privileged to see how the French soldiers lived. We ate with them and slept with them in the straw until finally orders came to send us to Paris.

A Story of Heroism.

French soldiers were walking into German ambush. French and English who tried to signal them were picked off by sharpshooters. Only way to intercept them was over open land and by German guns. Two English cyclists were shot down trying to ride it. A third made it through an inferno of bullets. The French commander of the halted column advanced and pinned the medal to the breast of the British cyclist. "It was given me for saving one life," he explained. "I have the honor of giving it to you for saving hundreds."

Convicts Eager to Fight.

Convicts in nearly every prison in England are voluntarily working three hours overtime daily to provide army requisites. Most first offenders are begging to go to the front. A burglar spokesman pleaded to be permitted to "work out the rest of our time on the firing line, if it is only digging trenches."

Added to such names as Alsace Lorraine Jones appear the following on the London insurance register, showing the effect of the war on newcomers in the world: Kitchener Barry, John Jellicoe Walker, George Bank Holiday Smith and Only Fancy Henry White.

A woman of Raon l'Etape during the German bombardment spent four days and nights in the same cellar where in 1870 she took refuge from the Germans.

Tricking Enemy's Air Men.

A correspondent of the London Chronicle sends a description of the crafty way in which the French sappers construct trenches so that they are hidden from the eyes of German aviators.

"I watched them at their task," he says, "and they made it a work of art, covering the trenches most craftily with grass and leaves, so that even German aviators flying low would never perceive these pits along the way-side whence French riflemen would pour withering fire upon the enemy's battalions."

Eats as Legs Are Cut Off.

The immediate amputation of an Austrian officer's legs was necessary. When this information was conveyed to him he said:

"All right, but first give me some food."

The food was furnished and the officer ate all through the operation, which was performed without the administration of an anesthetic.

Give Up Gems For Guns.

According to reports received in Rome a committee of women has been formed to induce all the women of Germany to give up their gold ornaments to be turned into a fund to buy arms.

Several million marks have thus been gathered. Each woman receives in exchange an iron ring inscribed, "I gave gold for this."

The Merciless Censor.

The strictness of the censorship may be judged from an article in the Revue de Paris, which begins:

"There is no danger of my being indiscreet. I know no more than anybody. But I believe that without saying too much I can say—"

Then followed six lines of blankness. The censor evidently was of opposite opinion to that of the writer.

SECOND LARGEST HARBOR.

That at Rockport, Mass., Will Rank Next to Cherbourg, France.

At Rockport, Mass., close to the tip of the shores of Cape Ann, a breakwater is being built which is one of the most notable examples of marine engineering on record. It was commenced in 1885, when it was estimated that ten years' labor and $5,000,000 would construct it. The completion is not yet in sight, however, the delay having been occasioned by the smallness and infrequency of appropriations, which have never been above $200,000. There have been years, indeed, when no stone was laid.

The breakwater, which, in the form of an oblique angle, will shut off Sandy bay from the ocean proper, is at its angle, two miles out from Rockport and when completed will inclose an area of water of 1,004 acres, making Sandy bay the second largest harbor in the world—that of Cherbourg, France, standing first.

The harbor under construction will have two entrances, one at the north and another at the south, so that, in any wind, it will be an easy matter to make one or the other of the openings.

Smith-Lever Act Is Educational.

Many letters are being received by the United States department of agriculture, which indicate that farm women in various sections believe the government is about to assist them with grants of money. This mistake appears to have arisen through a misunderstanding of the Smith-Lever act, under which funds contributed both by the federal and state governments are made available for practical demonstration work in agriculture and home economics. The purposes of the act are thus entirely educational, and there are no provisions whatever for direct financial assistance.

He Sold It.

"Have you found a customer for your gramophone yet?" "Oh, yes—I played it for 12 hours on end, and all the neighbors clubbed together and bought it from me."

OLD WAGON TRAINS

There Used to Be Exciting Times on the Santa Fe Trail.

TRICKERY OF THE REDSKINS.

They Employed All Sorts of Ruses to Plunder the Caravans and Murder the Whites—A Bit of Treachery and a Battle With the Troopers.

As the overland trade between the American settlements in Missouri and the Mexican pueblos in New Mexico increased in value following the opening of the Santa Fe trail the greater necessity of adequate protection for the traders and their stocks was met by both the United States and Mexican governments furnishing military convoys. The troops acted in a capacity not unlike that of warships guarding merchant vessels from piratical attacks, for no pirates were more persistent or bothersome than the savages of the plains.

The caravans usually left Franklin and later Independence and Westport in the spring. United States troops would accompany them to the caches on the Arkansas river; then Mexican troops would guard them to Taos, and sometimes even to Santa Fe. The return trip later in the summer was similarly protected. Sometimes two trips each way would be made in a year.

The presence of troops usually kept the Indians from making a direct assault on the trains. Even in his briefest moments an Indian has small relish of a fight on anything like equal terms; consequently the savages developed their aptitude for treachery and deceit.

Every sort of ruse their fertile brain could devise was used to separate the various divisions of a train or lure a small part away from the main convoy, where it could be plundered and the whites murdered without serious danger to the attackers.

A favorite plan and one which many times hoodwinked large parties into suffering some loss was for a small party of Indians to appear at the camp with protestations of peace. For diplomatic reasons the reds would be hospitably received and their request to eat and sleep in the camp oftentimes granted. That night the small party of Indians would attempt to stampede the live stock of the train. If successful a large force of savages would be concealed near by to aid.

Some ruses were far cleverer than that. One which completely fooled a Mexican officer and came near being the cause of his death was believed by the traders to deserve the palm. That officer, Colonel Viscarro, with 100 troopers, was escorting an American wagon train through the foothills of what is now southern Colorado when a party of Indians appeared and asked for a parley.

The American traders refused the request. The Indians withdrew and held a consultation. When the convoy reached the Cimarron river the savages appeared again. One rode forward with an arrow tied transversely across the shaft of a spear, a symbol of the cross. Viscarro was a Catholic and honored this novel banner. He rode out and spoke to the brave.

"If the Americans will move aside to some distance we will lay down our arms and surrender," the Indian said. "Certainly, brother," the colonel replied. He ordered the wagons to retire beyond a ridge. Hardly had they disappeared when a large force of Indians rose from concealment behind the sand dunes and poured a destructive fire into the Mexican ranks. Only the heroism of a Pueblo Indian guide with the troops saved the colonel from death. He heard one of the Comanches yell, "Now for the chief!" which was the signal for the treachery to begin. The Pueblo jumped in front of the colonel and received a charge of shot aimed at the officer.

The firing was heard by the Americans, who returned to the troops. They rode swiftly to the flanks of the attacking Indians and charged. Caught between two fires, the savages soon scattered in flight, but not until they had been handled severely in a hand to hand encounter, where clubbed rifle and tomahawks played a part. Colonel Viscarro was profuse in his thanks to the Americans.—Kansas City Times.

Quarrel No. 1.

"Confound it all," the bridegroom muttered angrily as he and his bride were returning from a ten days' honeymoon trip, "why do people stare at us so?"

"Probably wondering, just as we are why we married each other," replied the bride.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Sometimes That Way.

Calling a man a "genius" is often a polite way of intimating that he lacks common sense.

TIMES CONTEST OPEN TO ALL

Is Something for Everybody to Enter, not simply those who Have Much Leisure. Can Put in Spare Moments Profitably.

"I would like to enter The Times contest but I haven't the time to work on it." The above is a statement that is heard a great many times lately and the people seem to be sincere in their desire and also really to believe that this contest will require a large part of their time.

That is a wrong idea and the sooner one is rid of it the better will be their chances of winning one of the prizes. This contest was not started to furnish a steady employment for anyone. It was not started with any other idea than to give the energetic and ambitious people of this community a chance to make their spare time count. It does not matter how much time one may have but rather what they may do in that time.

It is for you, no matter if you only have a half hour a day to spend on it. If you will put in this half hour in good, conscientious effort and do so each day, so that each day will count for its share, you will be one of the big prize winners in the end.

Come in to-day and get a receipt book and give this race a trial. That much will cost you nothing, and, if you do not find that you can be successful, you can drop out at any time that you wish. This is an opportunity that will not be offered again in perhaps a life time and it is worthy of everyone's consideration and is worthy of at least a trial by most of the people.

The PLACE of HONEYMOONS

By HAROLD MACGRATH
ILLUSTRATIONS BY C. D. RHODES

CHAPTER VIII.

Marguerite and Emeralds.
By eleven o'clock Courtlandt had finished the reading of his mail, and was now ready to hunt for the little lady of the Taverne Royale. It was necessary to find her. The whereabouts of Flora Desimone was of vital importance. If she had not yet arrived, the presence of her friend pre- saged her ultimate arrival.
He rose and proceeded on his quest. Before the photographer's shop he saw a dachel wrathfully challenging a cat on the balcony of the adjoining building. The cat knew, and so did the puppy, that it was all buncombe on the puppy's part; the usual European war scare, in which one of the belligerent parties refused to come down because it wouldn't have been worth while, there being the usual powers ready to intervene. Courtlandt did not bother about the cat; the puppy claimed his attention. He was very fond of dogs. So he reached down suddenly and put an end to the sharp challenge. The dachel struggled vainly, for this breed of dog does not make friends easily.
"I say, you little Dutchman, what's the row? I'm not going to hurt you. Funny little coddler! To whom do you belong?" He turned the collar around, read the inscription, and gently put the puppy on the ground.
Nora Harrigan!
His immediate impulse was to walk on, but somehow this impulse refused to act on his sense of locomotion. He waited, dully wondering what was going to happen when she came out. He had left her room that night in Paris, vowing that he would never intrude on her again. With the recollection of that bullet whizzing past his ear, he had been convinced that the play was done. True, she had testified that it had been accidental, but never would he forget the look in her eyes. It was not pleasant to remember. And still, as the needle is drawn by the magnet, here he was, in Bellaggio. He cursed his weakness.

"Ah, voices! He stepped aside quickly.

"Fritz, Fritz; where are you?" And a moment later she came out, followed by her mother. . . and the little lady of the Taverne Royale. Did Nora see him? It was impossible to tell. She simply stooped and gathered up the puppy, who struggled determinedly to lick her face. Courtlandt lifted his hat. It was in nowise offered as an act of recognition; it was merely the mechanical courtesy that a man generally pays to any woman in whose path he chances to be for the breath of a second. The three women in immaculate white, hatless, but with sunshades, passed on down the street.

"Nora, who was that?" asked Mrs. Harrigan.
"Who was who?" countered Nora, snuggling the wriggling dachel under her arm and throwing the sunshade across her shoulder.

"That fine-looking young man who stood by the door as we passed out. He raised his hat."

"Oh, bother! I was looking at Fritz."

Celeste searched her face keenly, but Nora looked on ahead serenely; not a quiver of an eyelid, not the slightest change in color or expression.

"She did not see him!" thought the musician, curiously stirred. She knew her friend tolerably well. It would have been impossible for her to have seen that man and not to have given evidence of the fact.

In short, Nora had spoken truthfully. She had seen a man dressed in white flannels and canvas shoes, but her eyes had not traveled so far as his face.

Mrs. Harrigan took the omnibus up to the villa. It was generally too much of a climb for her. Nora and Celeste preferred to walk.

"What am I going to do, Celeste? He is here, and over at Cadenabbia last night I had a terrible scene with him. In heaven's name, why can't they let me be?"

"Herr Rosen?"
"Yes."

"Why not speak to your father?"
"And have a fistfight which would appear in every newspaper in the world? No, thank you. There is enough scandalous stuff being printed as it is, and I am helpless to prevent it."

As the climb starts off stiffly, there wasn't much inclination in either to talk. Celeste had come to one decision, and that was that Nora should find out Courtlandt's presence here in Bellaggio herself. When they arrived at the villa gates, Celeste offered a suggestion.

"You could easily stop all this rumor and annoyance."

"And, pray, how?"
"Marry."

"I prefer the rumor and annoyance. I hate men. Most of them are beasts. You are prejudiced."

If Celeste expected Nora to reply that she had reason, she was disappointed. Nora quickened her pace, that was all.

At luncheon Harrigan innocently threw a bomb into camp by inquiring: "Say, Nora, who's this chump Herr Rosen?" He was up here last night and again this morning. I was going to offer him the cot on the balcony, but I thought I'd consult you first."

"Herr Rosen!" exclaimed Mrs. Harrigan, a flutter in her throat. "Why, that's . . ."

"A charming young man who wishes me to sign a contract to sing to him in perpetuity," interrupted Nora, pressing her mother's foot warningly.

"Well, why don't you marry him?" laughed Harrigan. "There's worse things than frankfurters and sauerkraut."

"Not that I can think of just now," returned Nora.

Harrigan declared that he would not go over to Caxley-Webster's tea.

"But I've promised for you!" expostulated his wife. "And he admires you so."

"Bosh! You women can gab about as much as you please, but I'm in wrong when it comes to eating sponge cake and knocking my knees under a dinky willow table."

The women departed at three, for there was to be tennis until five o'clock. When Harrigan was reasonably sure that they were half the distance to the colonel's villa, he put on his hat, whistled to the dachel, and together they took the path to the village.

"We'd look fine drinking tea, wouldn't we, old scout?" reaching down and tweaking the dog's velvet ears. "They don't understand, and it's no use trying to make 'em. Nora gets as near as possible. Herr Rosen! Now, where have I seen his phiz before? I wish I had a real man to talk to. Abbott sulks half the time, and the Barone can't get a joke unless it's driven in with a mallet. On your way, old scout, or I'll step on you. Let's see if we can hoof it down to the village at a trot without taking the count."

He had but two errands to execute. The first was accomplished expeditiously in the little tobacconist's shop under the arcade, where the purchase of a box of Minghetti cigars promised later solace. The second errand took time and deliberation. He studied the long shelves of Tauchnitz. Having red copules in superabundance, he naturally preferred them in his literature, in the same quantity.

"Ever read this?" asked a pleasant voice from behind, indicating "Rodney Stone" with the ferrule of a cane.

Harrigan looked up. "No. What's it about?"

"Best story of the London prize ring ever written. You're Mr. Harrigan, aren't you?"

"Yes," diffidently.
"My name is Edward Courtlandt. If I am not mistaken, you were a great friend of my father's."

"Are you Dick Courtlandt's boy?"
"I am."

"Well, say!" Harrigan held out his hand and was gratified to encounter a man's grasp. "So you're Edward Courtlandt? Now, what do you think of that! Why, your father was the best sportsman I ever met. Square as they make 'em. Not a kink anywhere in his make-up. He used to come to the bouts in his plug hat and dress suit; always had a seat by the ring. I could hear him tap with his cane when there happened to be a bit of pretty sparring. He was no slouch himself when it came to putting on the mitts. Many's the time I've had a round or two with him in my old gymnasium. Well, well! It's good to see a man again. I've seen your name in the papers, but I never knew you was Dick's boy. You've got an old grizzly's head in your dining room at home. Some day I'll tell you how it got there, when you're not in a hurry. I went out to Montana for a scrap, and your dad went along. After the mill was over, we went hunting. Come up to the villa and meet the folks. . . Hang it, I forgot. They're up to Caxley-Webster's to tea; piffle water and sticky sponge cake. I want you to meet my wife and daughter."

"I should be very pleased to meet them. So this was Nora's father?"
"Won't you come along with me to the colonel's?" with sudden inspiration. Here was an opportunity not to be thrust aside lightly.

"Why, I just begged off. They won't be expecting me now."

"All the better. I'd rather have you introduce me to your family than to have the colonel. As a matter of fact, I told him I couldn't get up. But I changed my mind. Come along." The first rift in the storm-packed clouds; and to meet her through the kindly offices of this amiable man who was her father!

"But the pup and the cigar box?"
"Send them up."

Harrigan eyed his own spotless flannels and compared them with the other's. What was good enough for the son of a millionaire was certainly good enough for him. Besides, it would be a bully good joke on Nora and Molly.

"You're on!" he cried. Here was a lark. He turned the dog and the purchases over to the proprietor, who promised that they should arrive instantly at the villa.

Then the two men sought the quay to engage a boat. They walked shoulder to shoulder, flat-backed, with supple swinging limbs, tanned faces and clear animated eyes. Perhaps Harrigan was 10 or 15 pounds heavier, but the difference would have been noticeable only upon the scales.

"Padre, my shoe pinches," said Nora with a pucker between her eyes.

"My child," replied the padre, "never carry your vanity into a shoemaker's shop. The happiest man is he who walks in loose shoes."

"If they are his own, and not inherited," quickly.

The padre laughed quietly. He was very fond of this new-found daughter of his. Her spontaneity, her blooming beauty, her careless observation of convention, her independence, had captivated him. Sometimes he believed that he thoroughly understood her, when all at once he would find himself mentally peering into some dark corner into which the penetrating light of his usually swift deduction could throw no glimmer. She possessed the sins of the butterfly and the latent possibilities of a Judith. She was the most interesting feminine problem he had in his long years encountered. The mother mildly amused him, for he could discern the character that she was sedulously striving to batten down beneath inane social usages and formalities. Some day she would revert to the original type, and then he would be glad to renew the acquaintance. In rather a shamefaced way (a sensation he could not quite analyze) he loved the father. The puglist will always embarrass the scholar and excite a negligible envy; for physical perfection is the most envied of all nature's gifts. The padre was short, thick-set, and inclined toward stoutness in the region of the middle button of his cassock. But he was active enough for all purposes.

"I have had many wicked thoughts lately," resumed Nora, turning her gaze away from the tennis players. She and the padre were sitting on the lower steps of the veranda. The others were loitering by the nets.

"The old plaint disturbs you?"
"Yes."

"Can you not cast it out wholly?"
"Hate has many tentacles."

"What produces that condition of mind?" meditatively. "Is it because we have wronged somebody?"

"Or because somebody has wronged us?"

"Of misjudged us, by us has been misjudged?" softly.

"Good gracious!" exclaimed Nora, springing up.

"What is it?"
"Father is coming up the path!"

"I am glad to see him. But I do not recollect having seen the face of the man with him."

The lithe eagerness went out of Nora's body instantly. Everything seemed to grow cold, as if she had become enveloped in one of those fogs that suddenly blow down menacingly from hidden icebergs. Fortunately the inquiring eyes of the padre were not directed at her. He was here, not a dozen yards away, coming toward her, her father's arm in his! After what had passed he had dared! It was not often that Nora Harrigan was subjected to a touch of vertigo, but at this moment she felt that if she stirred ever so little she must fall. The stock whence she had sprung, however, was aggressive and fearless; and by the time Courtlandt had reached the outer markings of the courts, Nora was physically herself again. The advantage of the meeting would be his. That was indubitable. Any mistake on her part would be playing into his hands. If only she had known!

"Let us go and meet them, padre," she said quietly. With her father, her mother and the others, the inevitable introduction would be shorn of its danger. What Celeste might think was of no great importance; Celeste had been tried and her loyalty proved. Where had her father met him, and what diabolical stroke of fate had made him bring this man up here?

"Nora!" It was her mother calling. She put her arm through the padre's, and they went forward leisurely.

"Why, father, I thought you weren't coming," said Nora. Her voice was without a tremor.

The padre hadn't the least idea that a volcano might at any moment open up at his side. He smiled benignly.

"Changed my mind," said Harrigan.
"Nora, Molly, I want you to meet Mr. Courtlandt. I don't know that I ever said anything about it, but his father was one of the best friends I ever had. He was on his way up here, so I came along with him." Then Harrigan paused and looked about him embarrassedly. There were half a dozen unfamiliar faces.
The colonel quickly stepped into the breach, and the introduction of Courtlandt became general. Nora bowed, and became at once engaged in an animated conversation with the Barone, who had just finished his set victoriously.

The padre's benign smile slowly faded.

Might Have Been Either.

In a case tried in a Philadelphia court the prosecuting attorney had a good deal of fun at the expense of counsel for the defendant, each of whom seemed as stupid as the other. "Ignorance of the law," interposed the judge at a certain juncture, "is no excuse for violation of law." "May I inquire of your honor," asked the prosecuting attorney, "whether your honor's remarks are directed at the defendant or his counsel?"

Way of the Modern Poet.

"Here in my poet's hovel is beating my wounded heart—My trembling fingers are writing a song of my sufferings' smart—Got that, young lady?—To the desert I fain would wander; and there would languish and die—Oh, thunder," said the great poet, "I've done enough work for today; tell John to crank my machine, and get me my automobile coat."—Man Lacht.

If You Are Artistic.

If you have artistic tendencies which are crying for expression there is no better way to express yourself than in your personal appearance and the arrangement and decoration of your home. Make yourself and your home works of art. You will find this much more worth while than wasting a large amount of artistic vitality on second rate china painting, sketching, modeling and the like.

Have You Catarrh?

It's a Dangerous Disease—Hyomei is the Effective Remedy.

Catarrh, which is indicated by sniffing, frequent colds and crusts in the nose is a serious disease and if not checked surely spreads to the delicate linings of the air passages, and frequently destroys the hearing.

To cure catarrh you must have something that will quickly reach the diseased tissues, kill the germs, and drive out the poison.

Hyomei is just such a remedy. Being a mixture of antiseptic oils that you breathe through a small inhaler its health-restoring medication cannot help going direct to the aw and inflamed lining of the nose and throat, quickly relieving that choked-up feeling, stopping the unpleasant discharges, and healing the sore spots—you breathe freely. Even the worst cases respond at once.

ANTWERP CUT OFF, REPORTED FALLEN

Amsterdam Despatch Is Not Confirmed.

GERMANS HAVE ADVANCED

After Battering Away For Four Days at the Forts, Kaiser's Troops Are Storming the Defenses.

London, Oct. 7.—A news agency dispatch from Amsterdam says that communication with Antwerp has been cut off and it is reported that the city has been captured by the Germans. No confirmation of the report has come from any source.

The following official statement was given out by the war office in Paris:

"The Belgian forces defending Antwerp have occupied strongly the line between the River Rupel and the River Nethe. Against this line the attacks of the Germans have entirely failed."

"The situation in Antwerp is serious. Unless the allies give aid very quickly the city is likely to fall before the Germans."

This message, received from a correspondent in the beleaguered city, shows in the belief of persons in London that the German investing forces are advancing and that Antwerp is in a desperate plight.

Germans Storming Defenses.

Antwerp, Oct. 7.—German troops are storming the defenses of Antwerp.

The attack began late Monday, after the great siege guns of the Germans had battered away at the forts for four days, and fighting continued throughout the greater part of Monday night. The statement issued at the war office said the attack had been repulsed at all points.

"The enemy is trying to take by storm the defenses that the artillery has failed to destroy," said the statement, "but we have repulsed every attempt. The fighting was of a desperate character several times during the night, our troops engaging in hand-to-hand struggles with their assailants. The Belgians won new glory by their heroic defense."

The night fighting took place under the glare of searchlights operated by both the contending armies. Those of the Belgians were mounted on the fortifications, while those of the Germans played from a number of balloons behind their attacking lines.

Several times German aeroplanes attempted to fly over the city, but each attempt was met with a volley of bullets that drove the aviators to flight.

Messages from King George, President Poincaré, of France, and Czar Nicholas, of Russia, congratulating him upon the valor shown by the Belgian troops, and declaring that their operations have been of vast help in carrying out the campaign plans of the allies.

Reports were current that King Albert had been wounded by a bursting shell, but these were officially denied at the war office, where it was stated that the king was personally directing operations, but was incurring no unnecessary risk.

RUSSIANS INVADE GERMANY

Two Vast Armies March on Allenstein in North.

London, Oct. 7.—Advices received here from Petrograd, Rome and Paris indicate that the invasion of East Prussia by the Russian armies has begun at last in earnest.

The previous entry of the Russians under General Rennenkampf pales in insignificance before the present rapid advance of the forces under the personal command of the czar, which according to all information, is being made from two directions.

A dispatch received from Rome quotes the Russian ambassador to Italy as saying that two large armies, one from the east and another from the south, are converging on Allenstein, where an engagement had been fought earlier in the war.

It is unofficially reported from northwestern Galicia that the Russians have captured the fortress of Tarnow. Cossacks are riding within ten miles of Cracow. The czar's southern armies are developing their offensive against the right wing of the Austro-German forces.

In southwestern Poland, in the general region of Cracow, near Kielce, Russian cavalry has defeated German troops sent from France to defend Cracow. Unquestionably a great battle has been begun in that region, a combat which may determine the fate of Cracow and Silesia.

Grain Ship Sunk by Mine.

London, Oct. 7.—The steamship Ardmount, with a cargo of grain from Galveston, Tex., struck a mine off Holland and sank, according to an Ostend despatch. She carried a crew of thirty-five men, all of whom were saved.

Child Killed by Bull.

Little Falls, N. Y., Oct. 7.—George Spine, fifteen years old, while trying to keep cattle out of a cabbage patch on a farm near here, was attacked by a Holstein bull and killed.

SOUTH SEA ISLANDS SEIZED BY JAPAN

German Possessions East of Philippines Occupied.

Tokio, Oct. 7.—The navy department issued the following official statement:

"The Japanese squadron delegated to destroy the German fleet in the South Pacific has landed bluejackets on Jaluit Island, the seat of government in the Marshall Archipelago, which was annexed by Germany in 1886."

"It is believed the German base was destroyed and that the fortifications, arms and ammunition were seized. A British steamer in port was released. There was no resistance to the Japanese."

The navy department in explaining the taking of Jaluit says the move was made for "military purposes," and not for permanent occupation.

CAN WALK THROUGH TO RHINE

Thousands of French Well Established in Alsace, Says Correspondent.

London, Oct. 7.—Telegraphing from Belfort, France, the correspondent of the Daily Mail says:

"The Germans are trying to make the world believe that they will hold Alsace, but as a matter of fact the French are there in thousands, and so well established that the enemy has not dared to attack them."

"There is nothing in front of the French force of occupation. If they wish they can walk right through to the Rhine."

THE ROMANCE OF A SHOP GIRL

Story of a Courtship That Began in an Odd Way.

"Mother," said Bessie Childers as she threw off her wraps excitedly, "something's wrong at the store."

"What is it, child?"

"Today at noon I went to the cloakroom to get my handkerchief, which I had left my mistake, and found the large inside pocket of my cloak filled with lace."

"Good gracious! What did you do?"

"I didn't do anything. I knew that I was in a dangerous position and wanted to take the right course. I went back to my counter to think it over and concluded during the afternoon to take the things to the office and state the case, but when I went back to the cloakroom the laces were gone."

"What are you going to do about it?"

"Nothing. If they were taken away by the thief there's no need to say anything; if by a detective, they will either accuse me at once or watch me."

Elizabeth Childers was the daughter of Archibald Childers, who had lived rich and died poor. Her mother taught music, and Bessie sold fancy articles in the dry goods store of Banning & Co.

The next day Bertram Banning, son of the head of the firm, walked past her counter, looking at her with an expression that might mean anything, but surely meant something. Bessie naturally ascribed it to the fact that she was a suspected thief.

But the arrest did not follow, and the mother and daughter agreed that the firm was waiting further evidence of her guilt. Mr. Bertram Banning whenever he passed Bessie's counter gave her the same interested glance.

She made every effort to appear composed, and she succeeded admirably. Then one day Mr. Banning stopped at her counter and had a little chat with her. She had no doubt that he was intending to draw from her some evidence to criminate her, but he confined himself to very ordinary topics that could not possibly bear on the subject of stolen goods. A few days later he spoke to her again, this time intimating that he had made the discovery that she was the daughter of the once wealthy banker, Archibald Childers.

That he had been making inquiries about her was apparent, though his detectives had doubtless gathered the information. The poor girl was in dreadful suspense. She wished that it might end even if by her arrest. Bertram Banning was evidently managing the case, and she wondered that so affable a young man with so much wealth at his command or in prospect did not leave such unpleasant matters to some one else.

One day Bessie was notified that she was promoted to a higher position at a very largely increased salary. The first flash of pleasure in this advance was dashed by the suspicion that it was intended to get her where she could be the more easily entrapped. She talked the matter over with her mother, and they agreed that possibly the thief of the laces was at the bottom of it all. At any rate, influences were at work to get positive evidence. To find stolen goods on her clothing might not be sufficient. She must be caught in the act. As she did not intend to steal anything she had no fear of being caught, but she did fear being made to stand in the place of a thief. Her suspicions were confirmed when she found that she was placed in charge of a stock of goods kept in a room by themselves and where she would be a great deal of the time alone.

The day of her entry on her new duties Bertram Banning came in and congratulated her on her advance, especially as she would not have to sell the goods, only to be responsible for them. She received him in her usual constrained manner, and the more interested he appeared in her welfare the more confirmed she became that he was trying to decoy her off her guard.

Weeks went by, and as there was no denouement of the plot Bessie concluded that some one had been fooled.

One day Bertram Banning came into her room with an expression on his face that convinced her the bomb was about to explode. He did not at once explode it. He beat about the bush with embarrassment. Finally, bracing himself for an effort, he said abruptly:

"Miss Childers, I have something to—"

"Oh, don't," cried Bessie, covering her face with her hands.

"You know, then. You have looked beyond?"

"Oh, Mr. Banning, that you should!"

"She could not go on."

"And why not? Is there anything dishonorable in—"

"No, not dishonorable, but if you only knew how unjust."

"Unjust?"

"Yes, I am absolutely innocent."

"Is it innocent to steal?"

"I did not."

"Miss Childers, you are a thief of the worst kind. True, you have stolen an article of little value, only my poor heart."

Bessie Childers looked at him as one awakened from a dream.

"Your heart?"

"Yes. What did you suppose?"

"I thought you meant the laces."

Then it came out that the real thief had been caught long ago, but it was the incident that first turned Bertram Banning's attention to Bessie Childers.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WHAT TO HAVE FOR BREAKFAST.

BREAKFAST MENU.

Fruit.
Muffins.
Fried Tomatoes.
Hashed Brown Potatoes.
Baked Eggs.
Coffee.

WHEN vegetables are plentiful the wise housewife will find them not only a useful but a whole some addition to the breakfast bill of fare. They are featured in this menu.

Breakfast Muffins.—Take half a tea spoonful of bicarbonate of soda, dissolve it in a tablespoonful of warm water and add it to a half pint of thick sour milk. Separate two eggs; beat the yolks, add the sour milk and stir in quickly one and a half cupfuls of flour and a half teaspoonful of salt; beat and fold in the well beaten whites of the eggs. Bake in a quick oven.

Fried Tomatoes.—Take four large tomatoes, wash and wipe and cut each one into three slices. Season with one even teaspoonful of salt, one-half even teaspoonful of pepper, dust over with flour, dip each slice separately into beaten egg and cover with grated bread crumbs. Place a large frying pan with one heaping tablespoonful of lard, or dripping over the fire; when hot put in as many of the tomato slices as will go in; fry a light brown on both sides.

Hashed Brown Potatoes.—Take two cupfuls of cold potatoes, chop and season with onion juice, salt and pepper and turn into a well greased frying pan. Add one-quarter cupful of milk and cook without stirring for ten minutes. Fold and roll like an omelet on a hot platter when ready to serve.

Baked Eggs.—Make a cupful of white sauce, and when it is thick and smooth add to it four tablespoonfuls of grated cheese. Stir until this is melted, and then pour a quarter of it into a buttered baking cup and thus fill four cups. Into each one of these break an egg, sprinkle with salt and pepper and put into the oven until the eggs are set. Sprinkle a little minced parsley over the top and serve at once.

MY WOULD BE ASSASSIN

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

When it was finally settled that I was to go into the mountains of Wyoming on a hunting trip with old Bill Potts a dozen men called to bid me a last goodbye. They looked their pity and sorrow, and their hands lingered lovingly in mine. I was rather skeptical. I didn't see why I should be pulled down by a mountain lion, clawed into mince-meat by a grizzly bear or buried under a landslide, but they smiled feebly and shook their heads in a solemn way. Only one telegram received out of eight or ten threw any light on the matter, and the light came too late. It read:

"If you are going hunting with old Bill Potts you'd better make your will and leave things easy for the widowed and fatherless."

I liked old Bill. He was hale and hearty and good natured, and he could pack a mule, cook a good meal and shoot fairly straight. He was a smoker and a chewer, playing a good game of euchre, and I had every confidence that the pair of us would get along like brothers. We got away in good style, and it was two full days before anything happened to shake my confidence in him. Then as I sat cleaning my rifle he picked up the ax to cut some wood. He hadn't made six strokes before the ax flew off the handle and almost shaved my hair as it passed.

"Excuse me, colonel," said old Bill as he held up the handle. "The ax has been loose for the last six months and orter have bin fixed. I'll tend to it the first rainy day we have."

"But, man, that was a close call for me," I said as I felt my anger rising. "Yes, colonel, but as long as no damage was done it's all right. I kinder thought it was going to cut yer head off, but it riz a leetle and missed ye."

I figured that it was pure accident and overlooked it. Next morning old Bill found the trail of a lion near our camp, and after breakfast we took it up and started out. I had a Winchester, and he had a double barreled shotgun loaded with buckshot. He took the lead, and we had trailed for half a mile when I stumbled over a stone and pitched forward. Potts was about twenty feet ahead of me, gun on his shoulder and passing over perfectly open ground. As I went down both barrels of his gun were discharged, and my hair curled as the handful of shot shrieked over me and cut away half the branches of a young pine.

"What is it? What were you shooting at?" I shouted as I scrambled up, half expecting the lion had got in our rear and was stalking us.

"Ye see, colonel," replied old Potts, with a sheepish look on his face, "I aius carry my gun on the full cock so's to save time, and I guess I must have bin fingerin' them hammers."

"You do! You idiot! You jackass!" I yelled at him as I looked for a club. "If I hadn't stumbled over that stone you'd have blown a hole through me as big as a barrel!"

"Yes, but ye stumbled, and, bein' as no harm was done, I hope ye won't get mad about it."

I told Potts that if I ever caught him carrying his gun in that shape again I'd pump lead into his legs and leave him to the wolves, and for the rest of the day the relations between us were strained. Under the influence of a good supper and a pipe we got closer together, however, and by and by he went into the tent for the cards. He was fussing around for several minutes and I had just opened my mouth to ask him the cause of his delay when a bullet lifted the hat off my head and sent it ten feet behind me. I made two jumps for a bowlder and yelled to Potts, thinking I had been fired on by a renegade Indian, but when the man came out with my self cocking revolver in his hand I knew what had happened.

"You blunder head! You fool of a jackass!" I shouted as I made up to him. But he backed off and protestingly explained:

"Don't get nervous, colonel. I had never seen one of these self cockers and was just tryin' it. I might have p'inted it the other way, but I didn't think."

"No, you didn't, and the ball went through my hat! Potts, you are a fool! You don't know enough to chew beans!"

"What a fuss to raise over a leetle accident, and nobody hurt at that!" said Potts. "Waal, the fact of it is I'm goin' to quit. The boys said ye was a crank and a kicker and that I'd soon cut my job, but ye talked smooth and give orders fur plenty of grub, and I was willin' to take chances. Howsumever--"

"Howsumever what? Howsumever--squint eyed, dunderheaded pothunter!" Next day we started the outfit for home. Potts might have reconsidered his resignation, but I wouldn't give him a chance. I couldn't stay up there alone, but it was death to stay with him. We made the journey of fifty miles without a word. When we reached home I paid him off and said: "Potts, you--you--you are an unburning idiot!"

"What fur, colonel?" he innocently asked.

"Because you can't help it!" "Waal, mebbe I am, but if ye could only have held on to that crankiness of yers we'd have got at least four bars and five or six lions, to say nuthin' of wolves and wildcats. Day to ye, colonel! Awful sorry ye can't help fur meanness!"

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft.

It's Economy,--- Not Extravagance--- To Buy Clothes Here

Economy, because into our suits is put the very best quality material obtainable at the price.

Economy, because the tailoring, representative of Schloss Bros. & Co.'s highest skill, is the very best that money can buy.

Economy, finally, because you get so much more for your money in styles, service and satisfaction that you will wear one of our suits twice as long, and with twice the pleasure, of anything else you own.

Really, we feel that--it would be economy for any man to buy these clothes even if they cost half again as much as others.

But they do not,--the prices are the same as are asked in all Clothing stores and maybe lower.
